DETAILS:

The fast-growing number of new hire notification requirements that states are imposing on employers come with a unique set of challenges. In order to maintain compliance, organizations need to carefully monitor, interpret and enforce notification requirements, often across disparate locations. To accomplish this, HR professionals need stay up-to-date on the latest legislation and ensure that their organization has the right resources and processes in place to manage the requirements.

During this informative webinar Julia Bailey, senior director of Product Management for Equifax Workforce Solutions, will join Chad Richter, partner at Jackson Lewis, P.C., to explore existing, recently passed and upcoming state new hire notification regulations. Bailey and Richter will consider individual legislation such as the Massachusetts earned sick time requirement that is taking effect on July 1, 2015 and how such laws can be managed for your organization. Session attendees will learn about key legislative trends impacting state and municipal regulations as well as solutions and strategies for balancing the numerous requirements to help ensure compliance needs are consistently met.

Attendees: HR professionals and business leaders interested in learning more about best practices for managing state new hire notification requirements are encouraged to attend this educational session.

Registration: Information on "New Hire Notifications and Other State Requirements: Understanding the Compliance Challenge" can be accessed at: <http://eqfx.co/1T75ULd>.

This complimentary session is part of a series of educational webinars presented by Equifax Workforce Solutions experts.
