Fannie Mae to Introduce Time-Saving Paperless Income and Employment Verifications from Equifax® Into its DU Validation Service

Integration to help expedite mortgage underwriting process limiting need for consumers to provide paper income and employment documents

ATLANTA, Oct. 24, 2016 /PRNewswire/ -- Equifax Inc. (NYSE: EFX), a global information solutions provider, today announced that it has been selected as a designated vendor to support Fannie Mae's DU® validation service, supplying its industry-leading employment and income verification services, provided by Equifax Workforce Solutions, a business unit of Equifax Inc. The employment and income verification services include data from Equifax Workforce Solutions' The Work Number®, manual employment and income verification services and IRS tax transcript fulfillment service.

The move towards automation of income and employment verification will help to limit underwriting cycle times by reducing lenders' reliance on applicant provided W-2s, pay stubs and other income-related documentation. The DU income validation service leveraging the Equifax instant and manual income verifications, and IRS tax transcript fulfillment services goes live today; and, the DU employment validation service leveraging instant and manual verifications is scheduled to go live in December of this year.

The Work Number, which includes payroll records from more than 6,600 employers nationwide, including more than 75% of the Fortune 500 and the majority of federal government civilian employers, is a proven verifications solution in the mortgage industry. For those applicants whose information is not available in the database, Equifax will supplement the process with its manual verification service. Additionally, the IRS tax transcript fulfillment service allows lenders to retrieve tax transcripts providing added data around a consumer's additional sources of income.

"We recognize that the trajectory of the mortgage industry directly corresponds with the increasing demand for a frictionless origination process," said Craig Crabtree, general manager of Equifax Mortgage Services. "Equifax is uniquely positioned to provide lenders with employment and income data that will help increase transparency and create a streamlined experience that coincides with today's expectations for expediency."
