Limbach Holdings Announces Resignation of David S. Gellman from its Board of Directors

PITTSBURGH--(BUSINESS WIRE)-- Limbach Holdings, Inc. (Nasdaq: LMB) (“Limbach” or the “Company”) today announced the resignation of David S. Gellman from its Board of Directors and all committees of the Board of Directors on which he serves. Mr. Gellman leaves Limbach’s board in order to focus more fully on other business interests.

“We thank David for his insight and dedicated work on Limbach’s behalf, first when Limbach was private, later when the company became public, and always with an eye on how the business could improve and grow,” said Gordon G. Pratt, Limbach’s Chairman of the Board.

Mr. Charlie Bacon, Chief Executive Officer commented, “Dave was instrumental in guiding us through our transition to a public company and completing our evolution to our current platform. He worked to create and implement process-driven results that helped Limbach in its growth and development, and we wish him well in his future endeavors.”

“I have greatly enjoyed my ten plus years of association with Charlie and his management team at Limbach and wish them success as they pursue the next stage of growth as a public company,” said Mr. Gellman.

The Nominating & Governance Committee of the Board intends to immediately move forward with a selection process to fill Mr. Gellman’s seat, with the intention of selecting a new member with the experience to provide guidance to support the company’s growth plans.
