According to SimilarWeb, while CarParts.com was the fastest growing site of 2020, in addition it surpassed four of its competitors, NAPA Auto Parts, Auto Anything, Parts Geek and 1A Auto, in overall site visitors.

The distinction is yet another success resulting from the company's aggressive turnaround journey that started two years ago. The strategy was driven by a customer-first approach, significant investments in technology, and marketing and supply chain improvements that created exceptional growth across the business and transformed the way consumers shop for auto parts.

"It's exciting to see the hard work of the entire CarParts.com organization pay off. From day one we have been laser focused on modernizing the auto parts shopping experience, making it simple and affordable for drivers to keep their vehicle running. This is just one of the reasons we are experiencing website traffic growth that far surpasses the competition," said Houman Akhavan, Chief Marketing Officer of CarParts.com. “Our efforts are resonating with drivers. We are optimistic our growth will continue, as our business initiatives align with shifts in consumer behavior. They are moving from Do It for Me to DIY, shifting from offline to online commerce, and America now has the oldest car fleet the nation has ever seen. Our journey is ongoing, and we look forward to head into 2021 with a growing community of drivers.”
