ABOUT DR. JOSEPH CASCIANI

Dr. Joseph Casciani has a decades-long history in long-term care as a psychologist and manager of mental health practices. He was awarded the first contracts from the California Department of Aging in 1982 to develop mental health training for the state's nursing homes.

For 16 years, he was the clinical lead for a large mental health practice where he oversaw mental health programs to patients in hundreds of nursing homes, in eight states.

He is the past President of Psychologists in Long-Term Care, and a former Board Member of a national consortium of geropsychology training programs. In addition, he is the author of the Handbook of Health and Behavior, along with an online program on reducing anti-psychotic medication in nursing homes, and other publications.

Formerly, he managed psychology group practices for nursing homes and is now a consultant, public speaker, and trainer. Concept Healthcare (also known as CoHealth) was his multi-state practice, named to emphasize the importance of behavioral health concepts in the care of older adults.
