Additionally, in light of COVID-19 the longer-term impact on Navidea’s business is less clear at this time. Notably, Navidea will need to continue to assess disruptions, social distancing guidelines, and restrictions on travel or Navidea’s ability to develop Navidea’s product pipeline, potential closures of certain facilities, and the general economic impacts of this widespread public health crisis. In addition, the measures taken by local, state, and federal governments of the United States, actions taken to protect employees, and the impact of the pandemic on various business activities in affected states could adversely affect Navidea’s financial condition, results of operations and cash flows.
