China Direct Industries, top stock performer for June

By Paul Silver

For the month of June, the top performer in our proprietary WSR Small Cap 30 list was China Direct Industries, Inc. (NASDAQ: CDII), up 37.6% over its May close. We recently had a chance to speak with management in order to get an update and to provide our readers with a closer look at this unique company.

China Direct is an interesting and attractive investment vehicle because it is one of the few ways that a U.S. investor can gain exposure to the small cap market in China. It is a holding company that acquires majority stakes in small growing industrial segments in basic materials distribution and magnesium production/distribution. It also does consulting work for six small Chinese companies, in which it holds a minority ownership stake. Through its consolidation strategy, it is currently one of the largest producers of magnesium in the world.

Worldwide, approximately 800,000 metric tons of pure magnesium is produced annually. China represents approximately 70% of the global market, or 560,000 metric tons per year, making China the largest producer and the largest consumer of magnesium. From a production and distribution standpoint, China Direct's management estimates that it controls approximately 5% of the Chinese magnesium market and from a capacity standpoint, China Direct is the second or third largest producer/distributor in the world. The market is deeply fragmented; there is no one producer that controls more than 10% of the market and there are many "mom and pop" size companies that produce between 6,000 and 10,000 metric tons per year.

As anyone can attest, the last nine months in the global economy have been challenging to say the least. Because magnesium is used in the production of automobiles, steel, electronic devices, etc...demand for this metallic chemical element fell off a cliff. As a result, the price of magnesium fell precipitously. In the span of two months, the price plummeted from $5,500 down to $2,200 per metric ton.

Unfortunately, production costs did not decline as quickly, putting extreme pressure on production margins. Given these deteriorating market conditions, the Company faced the dilemma of continuing production and losing money or halting production completely and losing less money. In the end, management chose to idle its plants and go into a holding pattern until the economic fundamentals improved.

As a result, revenues have sequentially melted down over the past four quarters from $77.5 million for the quarter ending June 2008, to $62.5 million for the quarter ending September 2008, to $39.8 million for the quarter ending December 2008, to $20.6 million for the quarter ending March 2009. On an annual run rate basis, this four quarter downward sequential trend represents a 73% decrease ($310.24 million vs. $82.4 million) in sales. However, based on conversations with management, it appears that a recovery is beginning and fundamentals are expected to continue to improve over the next several quarters.

Magnesium production costs are variable and differ from other commodity production costs such as oil. The two main components for producing magnesium are energy (the process of making magnesium requires furnaces) and raw materials such as silicon, dolomite, rock. In a rising market, production margins expand because prices are rising faster than component costs. Contrarily, at the peak and as prices begin retreating, energy and raw materials costs are still rising, leading to margin compression. Therefore, the greatest opportunity for margin expansion is coming off the bottom, which is where the Company finds itself at present.

Although the Company remains focused on being one of the dominant players in magnesium production and distribution, the wild fluctuations in commodity pricing over the past year has convinced the Company to better diversify its revenue stream within the basic materials subgroup. Accordingly, China Direct is increasing its presence in basic materials and growing its role as a distributor by making acquisitions in complementary businesses.

For example, on July 23rd, the Company announced that it had set up a wholly-owned trading company focused on the import and export of basic materials, from metal ores to different types of petrochemical products. On July 30th, China Direct announced that it is entering the heavy truck parts manufacturing business in China via a joint venture. In addition to its revenue from its consulting business, revenues are becoming less magnesium concentrated. At present, management estimates that its revenue stream is 60% magnesium related, 15% consulting related, and 25% basic materials related. As the Company continues to roll-out new basic material projects and acquisitions, we expect that magnesium revenues will continue to fall as a percentage of firm wide revenues.

China Direct also understands the importance of being flexible in such a dynamic market. For instance, its strong balance sheet enables the Company to opportunistically buy and/or distribute as market conditions dictate. In a rising price environment for example, it may decide to purchase inventory from different suppliers and flip it at a later date. This flexible gives China Direct the ability to accelerate either the production side or the distribution side at the flip of a switch depending on what is more favorable at the time, thereby maximizing profits and limiting exposure to volatile market conditions.

For investors, CDII shares generally trade with the movement of commodity prices due to its large exposure to magnesium and in line with the economic outlook for China because it is weighted in many Chinese indexes. As explained above, we believe that production margins are greatest when the commodity pricing is coming off the bottom, as it is right now. We are also encouraged by the Company's efforts to increasingly diversify its revenue streams.

In January 2009, China Direct added some critical members to its management team and Board of Directors. These individuals all have decades of experience in the magnesium business, basic materials, mergers and acquisitions (corporate finance), and sales and marketing industry, and are well respected executives within their respective sectors. These additions help to firmly position the Company for its new diversified outlook and corporate strategy. China Direct's management team has stated that their longer term strategy is to create shareholder value by aggregating within industry group, capture economies of scale, and eventually monetize each segment whether by selling the division (e.g. magnesium) or spinning it off as its own public company. We believe that an investment in China Direct represents a strong opportunity and a unique investment vehicle for an aggressive investor seeking exposure to China and a commodities play.

WSR's Aggressive Growth and Speculator Focus Lists

Companies included in the WSR-Aggressive Growth list are primarily companies based outside of our home state of Florida and are generally trading at a significant discount to their peers, breaking out of long-term bases or have recently announced a significant event. To qualify for inclusion, companies in the WSR-Non-Florida Focus List must have a market capitalization less than $500 million, generated a profit over the most recent two quarters and achieved a quarter-over-quarter growth rate in excess of 10% or be cash flow positive and trade at less than one times book value.

Companies included in WSR-Speculator are typically early stage or turnaround companies which are frequently WSR clients and (in our opinion) have the potential for a three hundred percent return over the next three to five years. Changes to these lists are emailed to WSR's subscribers via its Daily Notes publication and are updated each month in The Emerging Growth News.

JUNE'S TOP COMPANIES AS MEASURED BY INSIDER BUYING VOLUME:

Investors and analysts look to the buying and selling trends of insiders, who are typically long-term investors, for clues to the broader market outlook. According to Ben Silverman, InsiderScore.com's director of research, "Insiders have been very accurate in terms of calling market bottoms, both temporary, in terms of corrections, and troughs."

Although insider buying is a useful tool to consider when making a decision on which stock to buy, it should be looked at carefully lest it give a false positive signal. Investors need to look behind the headlines and conduct their own research before buying on this basis. For example, option exercises can also give false signals.

This new feature summarizes the companies (trading under $5.00 per share) with the greatest amount of purchasing by insiders during the month of June 2009.

The chart on the left illustrates the 4 and 13 week trailing average "Net Buying" in relationship to the entire market. In other words, what percent of the stocks in the entire market have net insider buying. In theory, the higher the percent the greater the indication that the overall market will increase in price.

Past performance does not guarantee future success, and an investment in the model theoretical portfolio might lose money. Dividends and commissions are not included in performance calculations. The model theoretical performance includes performance history of the model micro-capital portfolio. The theoretical performance contains many high-risk speculative stocks, which tend to be more volatile and more illiquid than larger more established companies. The theoretical performance of the model does not represent actual trading and does not reflect material economic, psychological and market factors that might have impacted the results if actual money had been invested.

While no companies pay a fee to be included in our micro-capital portfolio or newsletter, certain companies, which are published as featured companies on our website, pay a due diligence fee for participation in the Wall Street Resources' financial publication and distribution program. In compliance with Section 17(b) of the Securities Act of 1933, detailed information regarding compensation from such companies is included on the last page of such reports, is explained in the disclaimer located at <http://wallstreetresources.net/disclaimer.html>, and is listed below. Tax consequences must be carefully considered.
