("Boardwalktech" or the "Company"), a leading provider of patented digital ledger and AI-enabled enterprise software solutions for intelligent information management, today announced that three existing customers – Levi Strauss & Co., SiTime Corporation, and Sekisui Specialty Chemicals – have expanded their use of Boardwalktech's Velocity platform and have adopted newly introduced AI capabilities designed to accelerate automation, improve visibility, and increase operational efficiency.

The expanded deployments represent continued momentum and increasing revenue among Boardwalktech's existing customer base as organizations leverage AI to modernize critical business processes without requiring costly system replacements.

"These expansions demonstrate the value our customers are realizing from combining AI with the trusted foundation provided by our patented digital ledger technology," said Andrew Duncan, CEO of Boardwalktech. "Levi's, SiTime, and Sekisui have been long-standing customers, and their decision to broaden their use of our solutions and adopt our new AI capabilities validates both our technology strategy and the growing demand for practical enterprise AI solutions." We are actively engaged with every customer as well as new prospects in deploying and expanding the use of Velocity with its new AI capabilities across these organizations."

The new AI capabilities embedded within Velocity help organizations:

- Accelerate business process automation
- Identify and manage exceptions proactively
