Vecchiarelli has been recognized among Las Vegas' best and brightest after being named by VEGAS Inc. to its annual "40 Under 40" list of civic and corporate leaders.

"When I moved to Las Vegas years ago, I quickly noticed a growing community, a close-knit network of creative people and a one-of-a kind business climate," said Mr. Vecchiarelli. "I've always believed that people need both leaders and mentors, so I'll continue to find ways to make an impact in both the business world and the volunteer sector."

VEGAS Inc. is a weekly business and feature magazine that examines the social trends and corporate direction of Southern Nevada. More than 350 individuals were nominated by their peers and clients, with the final 40 selected by an independent panel of judges. "This is an important award and a key event for this city because it represents both sides of the changing Las Vegas landscape," said Galaxy Gaming CEO Robert Saucier.
