Since its launch two years ago, “Man in America” has grown to reach over a million people each month, across audio and video platforms. After spending a decade creating content at The Epoch Times, Seth began to make a name for himself after the 2020 election with the release of a video exposing election fraud that was shared by President Trump.

Now, as a podcaster, YouTuber, and television personality, Holehouse has continued to fight against communism and socialism on each episode of “Man in America”. Guests have included Peter Navarro, Kash Patel, Senator Wendy Rogers, General Michael Flynn, and General Robert Spalding.

“It has been the ride of my life,” Holehouse said. “I didn’t think the show would have taken off as well as it did, but we’ve been very blessed by the support we’ve received and can’t wait for this next step.”

“We’re excited to welcome Seth to our line-up,” said Marcus Brown, Director of Content Strategy for the Salem Podcast

Network. “His perspective on issues resonates. In a short time, he’s already connected with a wide audience, and we think there’s still a ton of room for him to grow.”

The Salem Podcast network launched in January 2021 and is ranked as the 11th most listened to podcast network on the Triton Digital platform, with over 17 million average downloads per month.
