Inogen's Home Oxygen Therapy Service Expands to Florida

SANTA BARBARA, Calif., Oct. 6, 2011 /PRNewswire/ -- Inogen has expanded its home oxygen therapy service area to include the state of Florida. An innovator in oxygen therapy products and services, Inogen has restored freedom and independence to thousands of oxygen therapy users throughout the country and is now able to offer the same access to the residents of Florida.

The State of Florida has the largest percentage of senior citizens of any U.S. state as retirees are drawn to the pleasant climate that allows them to remain active in their golden years. To compliment their active lifestyle, oxygen therapy users desire an oxygen solution that eliminates the worry of running out of oxygen or relying on others for constant oxygen tank refills.

With an oxygen concentrator such as the Inogen One, offered by Inogen, gone are the big, steel tanks, the need for cumbersome 'portable' systems and the fear of running out of oxygen whenever away from home. The Inogen One takes the place of both an in-home oxygen therapy system and a portable unit. It is small, lightweight and runs on battery, AC, or DC power. It's a portable oxygen concentrator that makes its own oxygen so it never runs out.

Thousands of residents in Florida who require long term oxygen therapy have requested information on Inogen's oxygen service and the Inogen One Portable Oxygen Concentrator, but have been unable to proceed until Inogen's recent expansion. Inogen is pleased to now be able to offer its oxygen therapy service and the Inogen One in the state of Florida as well as most other states in the country. With the help of Medicare and private insurance, residents in Florida may be able to reclaim their freedom and independence on Inogen's service for little to no additional cost.
