Shift4's end-to-end commerce platform will power RedWeek's online payments for their timeshare rental and membership transactions. This includes direct customer billing and recurring payments as well as business intelligence features like managing chargebacks, fraud, reporting capabilities, and more.

With an audience of more than three million users, RedWeek connects travelers with individual timeshare owners looking to rent or sell their resort week. RedWeek combines the best aspects of both traditional rentals and hotels: listings typically including kitchens, multiple bedrooms and bathrooms, and laundry, but unlike other rental platforms, renters get hotel-like amenities such as onsite pools, restaurants, front desk, housekeeping, maintenance, and security.

“We’re excited to partner with Shift4 to deliver a better payment experience for our customers,” said Maurice Aubrey, President of RedWeek. “Shift4’s technology is second to none and will further enhance the service we provide to timeshare owners and travelers alike. Additionally, we have been thrilled with the ease of integration and the high level of service we have received from Shift4 throughout this process.”

“RedWeek’s innovative approach to vacation rentals makes travel planning easy and affordable,” said Anthony Perez, Shift4’s SVP of New Verticals. “Our integrated payment solution will further streamline this process to make the experience even easier and more frictionless for their customers. We approach every new integration as a true partnership, and are pleased that we have been able to support RedWeek’s technical payments needs while also providing white-glove service to make the integration process as effortless as possible.”
