GO FUND YOURSELF! brings together visionary entrepreneurs and a truly global community of potential investors. The first four episodes of the show, presented in partnership with DealMaker, will premiere with guest Titans UFC fighter Michael Chandler and actor/singer James Maslow, lending their star power and unique perspectives to the investment opportunities presented on the show.

The guest Titans join the Show's Founding Titans, David Meltzer, world-renowned business coach, author and investor; Jayson Waller, respected business thought-leader and serial entrepreneur with a track record of building billion-dollar businesses, and host of the popular 'Jayson Waller Unleashed' podcast; and VERB's own serial entrepreneur, Rory J. Cutaia, the Show's creator. Upcoming shows will feature Hall of Fame NFL running back and entrepreneur/investor/financial professional Marshall Faulk, among many other high profile guest Titans.

The first four debut episodes of GO FUND YOURSELF! will spotlight the following issuers:

GolfLync, a social platform for golf lovers – "if Tinder and Facebook had a baby that loved golf it would be called GolfLync"; Elf Labs, self-titled as 'the Biggest Disruption to IP since Disney'; Zirconia, a patented solution for the preservation of the world's building infrastructure; and Tuleva, sustainable manufacturing of essential metals & minerals vital to the world's energy transition and climate future. Representatives from each of these companies present their business, discuss the information contained in their respective offering documents, and field the tough questions from the show's panel of Titans – questions real investors want answered. This show offers virtually anyone from around the globe, a chance to evaluate exciting investment opportunities in up and coming businesses and invest in real time.

"Our goal is to democratize the investment process, allowing the everyman or everywoman – not just the elite insiders - the chance to invest in promising new companies, and likewise give those same deserving companies unprecedented access to the capital markets on their own terms that they otherwise may never get", states Rory J. Cutaia, VERB CEO.

This new business vertical generates revenue through fees paid by companies selected to appear on the Show, as well as from sales of products sold through the onscreen shoppable icons, and from advertisers and sponsorships, among other sources. There is currently a backlog of companies that have applied and been selected to appear on upcoming episodes of the Show. "This business is already generating revenue and we are just getting started – in fact, we haven't even begun marketing it yet. Given the overwhelming word-of-mouth response from companies seeking to showcase their businesses and investment opportunities on the Show, as well as from sponsors, advertisers, and celebrities who wish to appear as guest Titans on the show, I am extremely encouraged about what this new business vertical means for VERB investors", states Cutaia.

"By the way, this is just the first of our two new business verticals. In the coming months, we will be disclosing a new MARKET.live business model, already operating and generating revenue, as well as a third, as yet undisclosed business vertical, already operating and generating revenue that some may think is the most exciting of the three, with the greatest upside for VERB and its stockholders".

"As VERB repositions itself as more of a holding company structure, managing three distinct, yet complimentary businesses, an impressive balance sheet with a sizable cash surplus with a years-long runway and virtually no debt, together with an extremely clean cap table, we're ready and intend to deliver the type of performance our stockholders so clearly deserve."
