Established to ensure a standard of excellence in the field of diversity and inclusion, the Institute for Diversity Certification is the only accredited, international diversity certification body. Through pan's Test Center Network and web-based testing system, more than 1,000 Diversity and Inclusion professionals will be able to achieve Certified Diversity Professional (CDP) or Certified Diversity Executive (CDE) credentials. Both credentials denote a standard of excellence and indicate high performance in diversity management.

"The Institute for Diversity Certification provides an unmatched education and competency platform for Diversity and Inclusion practitioners to enhance their credentials and increase their credibility. pan offers the most sophisticated and professional network of testing centers available, and we look forward to drawing upon our many years of experience to administer our state-of-the-art assessment process to the Institute's certification candidates," commented Doug Cole, senior vice president and general manager, pan.

pan's testing facilities, which are located in easy-access commercial locations throughout North America, provide the highest quality, security, reliability and convenience of any testing experience. An end-to-end solution, pan's testing program leverages a combination of the latest secure test delivery technologies and encryption methods with best practices in test center and data management. All of the Institute's testing sessions will be supervised by proctors trained in the execution and management of the organization's specific protocols. In addition, by fully integrating online candidate registration and scheduling with test center communications, including confirmation and reminder emails and driving directions, pan's solution gives users the ability to self-schedule exams based on their own needs.

Leah Smiley, Founder of the Institute for Diversity Certification and Executive Director of the Society for Diversity, added, "The diversity certification program is not only valuable to professionals, but also to the business community. A certified diversity practitioner will be able to align diversity and inclusion practices with an organization's purpose, as well as establish tangible business benefits. The certification program that pan will administer for us will assure employers that inclusion experts are indeed experts."

More than 1,500 individuals representing the corporate, nonprofit, education and government sectors already have expressed interest in the diversity certification program, which will be available beginning in June 2011. More information about the program is available at www.diversitycertification.org.
