Blink Charging Co. Names Jonathan New Chief Financial Officer

Leading Electric Vehicle Charging Services Company Taps Corporate Growth Executive to Expand Leadership

MIAMI BEACH, FL, June 29, 2018 (GLOBE NEWSWIRE) -- A leading owner, operator and provider of electric vehicle ("EV") charging equipment and networked EV charging services, Blink Charging Co. (NASDAQ: "BLNK", "BLNKW") ("Blink" or the "Company"), announced today the appointment of Jonathan New as Chief Financial Officer (CFO).

In his role as CFO, Mr. New will lead the Company in broad areas of financial management, including strategic financial planning and analysis, corporate accounting, corporate and tax compliance, and the financial planning and management of international business as the Company expands. Mr. New will add strategic support to the existing executive team during its period of rapid global growth and charging station deployment.

"Blink Charging presents an incredible opportunity to guide the global expansion of a technology that is working to make electric vehicle use mainstream," said Mr. New. "I am looking forward to supporting the operational growth of our business both domestically and overseas by providing strategic feedback on financial and operating results and working with business leaders to develop ideas and plans for expansion initiatives."

Mr. New has more than thirty-four years of corporate finance experience in public innovation and technology companies. During his last ten years as CFO for the transaction processing and technology company Net Element, he helped guide the company through a $23 million offering as part of an up-listing to NASDAQ. In his past year there, he was instrumental in helping Net Element raise $16 million in equity transactions. Prior to his experience with Net Element, Mr. New was a CFO consultant and worked with several public and private companies on SEC compliance, financial growth, organization building and acquisitions.

"Jonathan is an important asset to Blink's long-term growth and a perfect fit for our executive team," said Blink's CEO, Mike Calise. "Bringing Jonathan on board will give us the strategic leadership we need to continue our global growth trajectory and demonstrate our continued commitment to the investment and business community as we expand our leadership position in the market."
