NextPlat's Global Telesat Receives Connectivity Services Contract Extension from Military Customer

Contract Renewal for Hardware and High Margin Recurring Airtime Services Expected to Contribute to Continued Growth in Connectivity Services Revenue Throughout 2025

COCONUT GROVE, Fla., April 14, 2025 /PRNewswire/ -- NextPlat Corp (NASDAQ: NXPL, NXPLW) ("NextPlat" or the "Company"), a global e-Commerce provider, today announced that its subsidiary, Global Telesat Communications Ltd ("GTC") has received a one-year wireless connectivity services contract extension from an African military customer.

The original contract for Iridium Push-To-Talk \(PTT\) device hardware and related airtime services from this military customer was awarded to GTC in the first quarter of 2024 and at that time, represented the largest contract of its type received by the company in its history. The extension contract includes options for additional future hardware purchases and annual airtime services. All hardware and airtime services sales under this contract are not subject to any recently imposed US tariffs.

Increasingly popular with government, military and enterprise customers, the Iridium Extreme® PTT devices provide instant, secure, and reliable communication anywhere in the world, making them an essential tool for multi-national operations, emergency response, and remote fieldwork. Designed for use in the most challenging environments, the devices offer global coverage, rugged durability, and advanced push-to-talk capabilities, enabling teams to stay connected at the push of a button.

"The renewal of this significant hardware and connectivity services contract is further evidence of value and growing international interest in Iridium PTT devices we are seeing from a diverse range of government and enterprise organizations. We are honored that this customer has chosen us to continuing supporting their connectivity needs and we look forward to further building upon the trust they have placed in us to keep their personnel connected," said David Phipps, President of NextPlat and CEO of Global Operations, and Managing Director of Global Telesat Communications.
