"As we embark on the next phase of growth, it's an especially exciting time to lead the creative aspects of our business and continue pushing the boundaries of what customers can expect from Sonic Automotive and EchoPark Automotive."

"It's our pleasure to welcome Steve and Stephen to our team," said Jeff Dyke, President of Sonic Automotive and EchoPark Automotive. "We are creating a best-in-class online guest experience, just as we have done in-person at our dealerships. Our goal is to ensure car buyers can purchase a new or pre-owned vehicle in the way that suits them best - online, in-person or a hybrid of both. Steve and Stephen are both seasoned eCommerce executives who will contribute to our long-term success. We are also especially pleased to welcome Marti to our leadership team as Chief Creative Officer after eight years of service to the organization. The impact of her contributions to Sonic Automotive and EchoPark Automotive have been felt across the entire company and especially by our customers."

Earlier this year, Sonic announced it expects to more than double its total revenue to over $20 billion by 2025. The addition of its first Chief Creative Officer, Chief Digital Retail Officer and a Vice President of eCommerce to drive online retailing strategy are major steps towards achieving this goal. The online retailing strategy is a key component of the Company's dedication to providing an exceptional guest experience and achieving its revenue growth targets.
