Synchrony and CareCredit Lend a Helping Paw to College Puppy Raisers Training Canine Companions' Next Generation of Service Dogs

Donation helps cover veterinary care to reduce a key financial hurdle for student puppy raisers in 23 states

Key Highlights

- $150,000 CareCredit donation to Canine Companions to help train and place service dogs at no cost to recipients
- $50,000 of donation dedicated to cover veterinary costs for college student puppy raisers across 30 colleges and universities in 23 states
- CareCredit has proudly partnered with Canine Companions for more than 10 years as part of its commitment to helping manage the cost of care, whether that care is for families, pets, or service dogs that change lives

STAMFORD, Conn., May 12, 2026 /PRNewswire/ -- Cue the tail wags: Synchrony (NYSE: SYF), a leading consumer financing company, today announced a $150,000 donation on behalf of CareCredit, its health and wellness credit card for humans and their pets, to Canine Companions®, a national nonprofit that provides expertly trained service dogs at no cost to adults, children and veterans with disabilities, and to professionals working in healthcare, law enforcement and educational settings.

This milestone gift celebrates Canine Companions' 50th anniversary, and CareCredit's longstanding partnership with the organization over the last 10 years. Of the total donation, $50,000 will directly help cover veterinary care for collegiate puppy raisers nationwide, easing one of the most common financial barriers faced by students who volunteer to raise and train future service dogs. The remaining $100,000 will support Canine Companions' broader program operations.

"Franklin is the first puppy I've raised. Watching him grow and change from that young puppy who couldn't do anything to this 8-month-old who is doing really well and focused is really impressive to me," said Lucy, a Canine Companions volunteer puppy raiser at Colorado State University. "He started with just routine [veterinary] visits, but since then, he's had a few ear infections and emergency visits. So, it's definitely a lot and can be expensive pretty quick. Having the support of CareCredit and Canine Companions is a huge lifesaver."

College student volunteers, like Lucy, play a crucial role in the earliest stage of a service dog's training by opening their homes and hearts to Canine Companions puppies for their first 18 months helping them learn 30 essential skills. Meet Lucy and future Service Dog Franklin and other students (with their puppies!) talk about their experience training future service dogs in this new CareCredit video series.

Collegiate puppy raisers traditionally cover all expenses, including food, toys, bedding, and critical veterinary care, which can total $2,500-$3,500 per puppy during that 18-month period. That's why CareCredit specifically allocated funds to cover veterinary care, products and services for puppy raisers at 30 colleges and universities coast-to-coast, including University of California: Los Angeles, Colorado State University, University of Connecticut and Longwood University. A full list of active collegiate puppy raising clubs can be found here.

"College students play an essential role in the Canine Companions program, delivering the early training and socialization that put future service dogs on the road to success," said Jonathan Wainberg, Senior Vice President and General Manager, Pet, Synchro.

"Veterinary expenses, especially unexpected bills, can be hard to manage on a student budget. This donation allows puppy raisers to stay focused on what they do best: developing confident, capable dogs that will one day change someone's life. It also underscores why CareCredit exists in the first place: to help people manage the cost of care."

Canine Companions, founded in 1975, stands as the largest provider of service dogs in the U.S. and was notably the first organization to train and provide these animals specifically for individuals with physical disabilities. They have been working with collegiate puppy raisers for more than 25 years. CareCredit's support will help ensure future service dogs receive the essential training and comprehensive veterinary care they need before being placed with their partners.

"As Canine Companions celebrates 50 years of providing greater access to independence, we are honored to continue our vital mission," said Jeanine Konopelski, Chief Marketing Officer for Canine Companions. "Support from partners like CareCredit is critical to our cause. This funding directly empowers more dedicated students to join our mission, enabling us to provide increased independence to those who need it most."

Since its inception, Canine Companions has placed over 8,600 expertly trained service dogs across the country. To learn more about becoming a Canine Companions puppy raiser, please visit canine.org/raise.
