Supply & Demand Chain Executive Announces Three Volt Experts Among Its 2011 "Pros to Know"

Leading Business Magazine Presents Annual Listing of Top Supply and Demand Chain Industry Professionals

NEW YORK--(BUSINESS WIRE)-- Volt Information Sciences, Inc., a global provider of talent, technology and consulting solutions, announced that three professionals from its corporate leadership team have been named to the 2011 Practitioner "Pros to Know" list by Supply & Demand Chain Executive magazine. This is the magazine's 11th annual listing of Pros to Know in the Supply Chain Industry.

The Practitioner Pros to Know list comprises exceptional corporate executives at manufacturing and non-manufacturing enterprises who are leading initiatives to help prepare their companies' supply chains for the significant challenges in the year ahead.

The first Volt honoree, Pat Damrow, is Vice President of Quality Management. Ms. Damrow was named a Pro to Know for implementing a series of global initiatives for quality improvement, which include establishing a Quality Council of Volt's global quality leaders, driving the Company to mirror suppliers' quality and audit control standards within Volt's business units, and a unified Business Process Excellence benchmarking system for prioritized continual improvement. Collectively, Ms. Damrow's initiatives proactively drive compliance, manage risk and achieve alignment with the goals of Volt's dispersed network of external suppliers.

Vice President of Diversity Solutions, Hae Sebes, is recognized for her diversity initiatives, which have enabled the Company to build levels of inclusion and access of diversity suppliers to Volt's procurement process, identify and engage new and innovative diversity partners, and leverage the strengths of diversity partners to meet client spend goals, both Tier 1 and Tier 2.

Joanne Roth, Vice President of Procurement (CPO) and Enterprise PMO, is Volt's third honoree. Ms. Roth was named a Pro to Know for her strategy of building seamless collaboration across Volt's diverse business units and center-led procurement organization to achieve optimum cost efficiencies across the Company's supply chain.

Volt Information Sciences President and CEO Steven Shaw commented, "To meet today's economic realities, it is essential that Volt continues to drive innovation and deliver best-in-breed business intelligence and measurable ROI to our clients and other supply chain partners. In a distinguished field of nominees, it is a great privilege to receive national recognition from professionals who share a common goal of transforming supply chains of today's global enterprises. I commend Joanne, Pat and Hae for their dedication and creativity in deploying leading strategies that strengthen our organization."

"Supply Chain is increasingly recognized as a strategic differentiator for leading small, medium and large enterprises, and Supply Chain leaders have become crucial to the success of the enterprise in meeting the challenges of the 'New Normal' economy," said Andrew K. Reese, editorial director of Supply & Demand Chain Executive. "Our annual Practitioner Pros to Know listing highlights many of these outstanding executives and their accomplishments, and it offers a roadmap for other leaders looking to leverage Supply Chain for competitive advantage."

To select this year's Pros to Know, Supply & Demand Chain Executive's editorial selection committee culled through more than 350 submissions to find the applicants that best fit the criteria. The full listing of the 2011 Pros to Know will be available in the February/March 2011 issue of Supply & Demand Chain Executive magazine and e-book beginning in early March and on the Supply & Demand Chain Executive Web site at SDCExec.com/2011Prostoknow.
