SEI Roundtable Research: Financial Executives Look for Answers to Critical Pension Questions

Plan Sponsor Research Identifies Critical Issues and Provides Guidance

OAKS, Pa., Aug. 11 /PRNewswire-FirstCall/ -- Ongoing investment volatility, asset losses, lower funded levels and increased focus on fiduciary obligation have created unprecedented difficulties for financial executives managing pension plans, according to research released by SEI (Nasdaq: SEIC). In a white paper released today, SEI used feedback from financial executives to determine the most critical and commonly misunderstood topics currently on the minds of plan sponsors.

In recent months, SEI hosted a series of interactive roundtable meetings in a variety of US cities to uncover areas of concern facing defined benefit plans. The paper, entitled, The Pension Tension: 7 Critical Questions Weighing on the Minds of Financial Executives, is a result of several recurring themes and challenges raised during the roundtable meetings. The questions are primarily focused on the benefits of funding relief, strategies for businesses that lack cash for required contributions, how investment processes are changing and long-term strategies for pensions.

"Plan sponsors currently have an enormous appetite for information that can help them answer some of the pension related questions they have," said Jon Waite, Director, Investment Management Advice and Chief Actuary for SEI's Institutional Group and facilitator for the roundtables. "These forums provide an opportunity for them to learn best practices, hear from pension and finance executives at other local organizations and narrow the information gap. This paper is an extension of the issues that attendees have most wanted to discuss."

Started in 2004, SEI's Pension Management Research Panel is an independent panel of more than 350 executives handling their organizations' defined benefit plan. The panel looks to conduct research in an effort to provide its members with best practices and tactical, real-world strategies for dealing with the critical issue of managing defined benefit pension plans. The panel is hosting seven additional roundtable events around the country in the next few months. For more information, please visit www.seic.com/roundtables.
