Maximus Awarded $86 Million Contract to Advance Rapid Capability Development and Operational Readiness for Air Force Cyber Command and Control Systems

New contract deepens technology footprint in the defense sector, supporting modernization and sustainment service

TYSONS, Va.--(BUSINESS WIRE)-- Maximus (NYSE: MMS), a leading provider of tech-enabled government services, today announced it has been awarded a new Joint Cyber Command & Control (JCC2) Readiness (JCC2-R) contract by the United States Air Force Life Cycle Management Center (AFLCMC/HNCJ) Cryptologic and Cyber Systems Division (CCSD) to enhance interoperability and deliver innovative solutions. Under this second award from the Air Force, with a potential value of $86 million, Maximus will lead engineering analysis, software modification, maintenance, and enhancement, and the maturation of existing architecture and infrastructure. The contract period of performance is a base year with four one-year option periods with an optional six-month extension.

“Maximus brings years of technology expertise and proven leadership from across federal agencies,” said Pamela Powers, Executive Managing Director, Defense and National Security Market. “Our team is honored to support the Air Force’s defense readiness mission by driving novel solutions and mission-based outcomes that contribute to and directly sustain America’s warfighter.”

Added Derrick Pledger, Chief Digital & Information Officer, “This new work with the Air Force represents a significant expansion of Maximus’ technology portfolio within the defense sector and highlights our expertise in technology, software engineering and development, and modernization. Our team of highly skilled technology professionals are excited to deliver modeling and application analysis that enable effective and efficient mission execution.”
