Small Business Owners' Confidence About U.S. Economy, Own Business Soars To Record Highs

-- PNC survey shows 88 percent - highest ever - are optimistic about U.S. economy

-- 94 percent are highly optimistic about the near-term outlook for their own business

-- Nearly 70 percent anticipate positive results from the possibility of tax reform

PITTSBURGH, May 4, 2017 /PRNewswire/ -- Optimism among business owners about the U.S. economy and the outlook for their own businesses has reached levels never-before seen in the 15-year history of the PNC Economic Outlook, a biannual telephone survey of small- and medium-sized business owners.

Eighty-eight percent of those surveyed are optimistic about the near-term outlook on the national economy, up from 71 percent in the fall and 56 percent last spring. Eighty-nine percent are optimistic about their local economy, up from 77 percent in the fall of 2016, the survey showed.

"The hope we noted in the fall survey, has for many, turned into enthusiasm and is consistent with other indicators of improved confidence," said Gus Faucher, chief economist of The PNC Financial Services Group. "It remains to be seen, however, if this increase in optimism will convert into improvement in real economic activity."

Economic Optimism Translates to Personal Positivity

Among survey participants, expectations for the performance of their own company also markedly have improved. Ninety-four percent are optimistic about their own company's outlook for the next six months, compared to 85 percent in the fall and last spring.

Further, 62 percent of the business owners surveyed anticipate sales increases in the next six months, the highest since spring 2007; 57 percent anticipate an increase in profits, the highest since spring 2005 and 28 percent expect increased full-time hiring, the highest proportion of businesses since spring 2012.

"Though economic fundamentals have not changed appreciably since the fall, it is encouraging that business owners are anticipating greater sales and profits," Faucher said. "These are key indicators we look for when predicting broader economic growth."

Businesses Casting Hopeful Eye Toward Washington

The survey also examined business owners' thoughts on the new Congress and Administration in Washington, and their view is somewhat mixed. Overall, four in 10 (42 percent) say they expect the policies of the new administration and Congress, in general, to have a positive impact on their business this year. One-third (32 percent) say it's too early to predict and 17 percent say it will have no impact. Only nine percent anticipate a negative effect.

"Business owners are hopeful about the pro-business stance they are seeing from Washington, and are eager to see what regulation and policy changes may be ahead," Faucher said. "But they seem to be taking a wait-and-see attitude, as it takes time for these kinds of changes to generate longer-term impacts."

In fact, only 44 percent of business owners surveyed say they would anticipate a bump in profits if regulations were eased or eliminated. When it comes to hiring, one-third (32 percent) say reductions in regulations would have a positive impact.

Corporate Tax Reform Tops Business Owners' Agenda

When asked specifically about potential policy reform, survey respondents cited corporate tax reform as the single most anticipated change, viewed favorably by nearly seven in 10 business leaders.

But business owners are more evenly divided when it comes to the impact of potential trade restrictions or tariffs: 33 percent are in support, 32 percent oppose and 31 percent are unsure.
