Twenty-Three Ingram Micro Executives Named to CRN's 2022 Women of the Channel; Three Celebrated on Power 100

Industry Leaders Jennifer Anaya, Sabine Howest and Susan O'Sullivan Named to Annual CRN Power 100 List

IRVINE, Calif.--(BUSINESS WIRE)-- Ingram Micro Inc. today announced twenty-three members of its award-winning team were named to this year's CRN® 2022 Women of the Channel (WOTC) list with three leaders – Jennifer Anaya, SVP of Global Marketing; Sabine Howest, SVP Vendor Engagement and Digital Operations; and Susan O'Sullivan, VP, U.S. Sales – earning the title of Power 100.

Presented annually, the esteemed list honors the incredible accomplishments of female leaders in the IT channel and shines the spotlight on the top 100 most powerful female executives working in the channel today. This year's WOTC honorees come from all corners of the IT channel, celebrating those leaders whose vision, expertise, and contributions make an impact on the industry every day.

“Congratulations to all those leaders represented here who are working across their organizations to lead by example, advocate for equality and achieve greatness together,” says Paul Bay, CEO, Ingram Micro. “A career in tech has never been more purposeful. It's exciting to see our team, as well as so many other leaders from our partners and providers, celebrated by CRN for their career accomplishments, daily contributions, and inspired thinking.”

Pulling from its growing global footprint, Ingram Micro's 2022 Women of the Channel honorees include executives from the indispensable partner's business and consumer solutions, cloud, data center, digital operations, emerging technologies, financing, IoT, marketing, partner communities (SMB Alliance and Trust X), partner enablement, sales, and vendor management teams.

Driven to do well by doing good, many of these executives serve their local communities and charities and participate in Ingram Micro's Women's Leadership Forum and Women in Cloud efforts, which include an in-person, executive leadership panel next week at the 2022 Cloud Summit in Miami, Florida.
