"We are incredibly grateful for our customers and store employees who donate to make a real difference in the lives of individuals living with muscle-debilitating diseases in this community."

From December 1 to December 31, GPM's convenience stores and associates are selling holiday-themed paper pinups for $1 to help fund treatments and cures for muscular dystrophy, ALS and dozens of related neuromuscular diseases, as well as send kids with disabilities to barrier-free summer camps.

Since first teaming up with MDA in 2011, GPM and their customers have raised more than $970,000 in support of MDA's shared mission to support people whose abilities to move have been compromised by neuromuscular disease, including everyday abilities like walking, running, hugging, talking and even breathing.

"Support from GPM Investments, their associates and customers, through MDA's holiday fundraising program, is changing lives," said MDA Chief Philanthropy Officer Karen Lewis Alexander. "Donations raised through the program give kids with muscular dystrophy the opportunity to experience independence, gain self-confidence and make life-long friends.
