Operational Highlights and Strategic Progress

- Completed initial public offering and began trading on the New York Stock Exchange under the ticker symbol “CFND” on August 7, 2025, establishing C1 Fund as the first exchange-listed fund focused on digital asset services and technology companies.
- Executed seven post-IPO investment agreements within months of listing, building an active pipeline for capital deployment into late-stage private digital asset companies.
- Rapidly added positions since fund inception, and by December 31, 2025 held a portfolio that included Alchemy, Blockchain.com, Chainalysis, ConsenSys, Figment, Kraken, and Ripple, with total investments at fair value of $30.5 million, representing 58.40% of net assets.
- Reported that two portfolio companies, Kraken and Blockchain.com, are pursuing or evaluating potential public listings, with Kraken having filed a confidential IPO submission with the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission. Blockchain.com is said to be targeting a potential 2026 listing.
- Announced recent open-market share purchases by members of the Board of Directors and senior leadership team in December 2025, reflecting insider alignment and long-term confidence in the Fund’s strategy.

Chief Investment Officer Elliot Han commented, “Our first two quarters as a public fund were defined by swift execution. We moved quickly from IPO to signed agreements, built a year-end portfolio across key areas of digital asset infrastructure, and have already begun to generate early liquidity events from the portfolio. BitGo’s public offering and the recent partial divestiture of our Ripple position at an approximate 150% return in less than four months reinforces our sourcing discipline and our active approach to portfolio management.”

Subsequent Events and Recent Portfolio Activity

- Subsequent to year-end, C1 Fund purchased $2,200,003 of Series B-1 Preferred shares in BitGo. BitGo completed its initial public offering on January 22, 2026, and C1 Fund’s shares are subject to a six-month lockup through July 21, 2026.
- On January 29, 2026, C1 Fund’s Board of Directors approved a stock buyback program and authorized management to proceed at its discretion.
- Subsequent to year-end, C1 Fund invested a total of $10,472,148 including BitGo, Fireblocks, Uphold, and Blockratize Inc. (Polymarket) along with increased investment in Ripple, ConsenSys, and Chainalysis bringing total invested capital including 2025 fees to $41,361,297.
- Subsequent to year-end, C1 Fund announced a partial divestiture of its investment in Ripple of $422,100 generating an approximate 150% return in less than four months. This marked the Fund’s first liquidity event since its public listing in August 2025, and along with the BitGo IPO highlights C1 Fund’s ability to identify and monetize value across leading private digital asset companies while maintaining exposure to the broader digital asset infrastructure ecosystem.

Chief Executive Officer Dr. Najam Kidwai commented, “Since our listing in August, we have steadily translated our access and network into portfolio construction, capital markets activity, and early realized outcomes. With year-end NAV of $7.81 a share, we believe the current market price materially undervalues our portfolio and creates a rare opportunity for public market investors to access high-quality private digital asset companies at a significant discount.

“We also believe the macro backdrop is becoming increasingly favorable, driven by improving regulatory clarity, broader institutional participation, the convergence of AI and blockchain infrastructure, and a growing pipeline of potential liquidity events across the sector. Combined with BitGo’s IPO, our recent Ripple liquidity event, insider share purchases, and our share repurchase program, we believe that C1 Fund offers investors a differentiated way to participate in private market upside with multiple potential catalysts on the horizon.”
