Cleveland-Cliffs Names Steven Baisden Director, Investor Relations and Corporate Communications

CLEVELAND, June 20 /PRNewswire-FirstCall/ -- Cleveland-Cliffs Inc (NYSE: CLF) today announced the appointment of Steven Baisden as director, investor relations and corporate communications, effective June 18, 2007. Baisden is responsible for creating and leading Cliffs' strategic investor relations and corporate communications program. This program will be designed to support overall business objectives, as well as create awareness and understanding of Cliffs' progress toward becoming a global entity in the mining industry.

Baisden has 11 years' cumulative investor relations, corporate communications and marketing management experience at Fortune 1000 and other companies.

From 2004 to 2007, Baisden, 33, was responsible for the development and execution of investor, corporate and strategic transaction communications, including acquisitions and divestitures, for Agilysys, Inc., a Nasdaq-listed company and provider of information technology solutions. Previously, he was manager, investor and public relations, for OfficeMax, Inc., with accountability for all investor, media and trade communications from 2000 through its 2004 acquisition by Boise Cascade Corporation.

Laurie Brlas, Cleveland-Cliffs' senior vice president, chief financial officer and treasurer, said, "Steve brings to Cliffs solid experience in developing strategic communications to effectively convey information important to our Company's stakeholders. Specifically, his expertise in developing proactive programs to reach investors appropriate for Cliffs' shares complements the talents of Cliffs' existing management team. His contributions will be significant as we expand awareness and garner increasing interest from the investment community."

Baisden earned his B.S. in Public Relations from Kent State University and is an active member of the National Investor Relations Institute.
