CLS Holdings USA Awarded Non-Provisional U.S. Utility Patent for Cannabidiol Extraction and Conversion Process

Continues to Bolster its Intellectual Property Protection

LAS VEGAS, June 13, 2018 (GLOBE NEWSWIRE) -- CLS Holdings USA, Inc. (OTCQB:CLSH) "CLS," a development stage diversified cannabis company operating as Cannabis Life Sciences, is pleased to announce today that it has been awarded a non-provisional U.S. utility patent for cannabidiol extraction and conversion process by the United States Patent and Trademark Office. U.S. patent number 9,950,976 B1.

The patent is directed to a process for the extraction of cannabidiol from any variety of cannabis plants. The extraction process includes a sizing unit wherein raw cannabis plant material is reduced to a uniform size, and a blending unit wherein an extraction solvent is blended together with the cannabis plant material to form an initial extract. The conversion process, wherein the processed extract is combined and processed with an acidic component, involves a separator unit in which solvent is added and a separator organic effluent is obtained.

CLS Chief Executive Jeff Binder commented, "We believe our strong intellectual property differentiates us from many of the operators out there. We will seek to license our proprietary extraction and conversion methodology to other operators to be able to monetize it and help build long term shareholder value."
