Management Commentary

"During the month of August, the Company mined 330 bitcoin, which was in line with July's production despite network factors including a 6.3% increase in network difficulty month over month," said Sean Farrell, SVP of Operations at TeraWulf. "Additionally, improved performance at the Lake Mariner facility due to enhanced miner repair efforts was offset by two planned transmission outages at Nautilus in early August totaling approximately three days to further augment long term energy supply reliability," added Farrell.

Production and Operations Update

The Company is currently expanding its Lake Mariner facility with construction of Building 3, which will house 43 MW of capacity and the next generation Antminer S19j XP bitcoin mining machines. Building 3 is targeted for completion by year-end 2023.

As of August 31, 2023, the Company had an operational miner fleet of approximately 50,000 of the latest generation miners, comprised of 34,000 miners at its wholly owned Lake Mariner facility in New York (5,000 of which are hosted pursuant to an agreement expiring in the fourth quarter of 2023) and 16,000 self-miners at the nuclear-powered Nautilus facility in Pennsylvania.

About TeraWulf

TeraWulf (Nasdaq: WULF) owns and operates vertically integrated, environmentally clean Bitcoin mining facilities in the United States. Led by an experienced group of energy entrepreneurs, the Company currently has two Bitcoin mining facilities: the wholly owned Lake Mariner Data facility in New York, and Nautilus Cryptomine facility in Pennsylvania, a joint venture with Cumulus Coin, LLC. TeraWulf generates domestically produced Bitcoin powered by nuclear, hydro, and solar energy with a goal of utilizing 100% zero-carbon energy. With a core focus on ESG that ties directly to its business success, TeraWulf expects to offer attractive mining economics at an industrial scale.
