Concentra's new Boise medical center will officially open with a ribbon-cutting ceremony on July 22, expanding access to occupational health services for employers and employees across the Treasure Valley.

The new medical center is in Federal Way Plaza at 3237 South Federal Way, Boise, Idaho 83705, providing convenient access for employers and employees throughout the city and the surrounding Treasure Valley region. Located near Boise Airport and major transportation routes, Concentra Boise Airport is well positioned to serve employers in many of the region's fastest growing industries.

The Boise opening expands Concentra's footprint as it extends its presence into Idaho and represents an important milestone in the company's continued expansion across the West, with plans already underway for a second location in nearby Meridian, opening later this year. As Idaho experiences sustained population growth, business investment and workforce expansion, Concentra is investing in local access to occupational health services that help employers build healthier, safer and more productive workforces. Concentra's arrival brings nearly five decades of occupational health expertise and comprehensive workforce health services to help Idaho employers meet those challenges.

"As Boise continues to grow, we are committed to creating a community where our residents and families can live, work, and grow," said Boise Mayor Lauren McLean. "Concentra's investment in Boise demonstrates a confidence in our local economy, and we look forward to the impact their work in health services will have for our residents."

Concentra plans to commemorate the opening with a ribbon-cutting ceremony and community celebration featuring local business leaders, employer partners and invited elected officials. The event will highlight the medical center's role in supporting workforce health, strengthening the region's expanding business community.

"Opening our first Idaho medical center is an important milestone for Concentra and reflects our confidence in the future of the Boise market," said Doug McAndrew, executive vice president and chief operations officer at Concentra. "The Treasure Valley's strong economy and growing workforce create a tremendous opportunity to support employers with occupational health services that help protect their people and sustain growth."

Concentra will provide a full range of occupational health services, including work injury care, physical therapy, drug testing, Department of Transportation physical exams, pre-placement exams, medical surveillance services, and workforce health programs focused on injury prevention, employee well-being, workforce readiness, and the acceleration of safe return-to-work outcomes. Telemedicine for minor work injuries will also be available through Concentra Telemed[®], the company's proprietary telemedicine platform.

"As Boise continues to grow, employers are facing increasing challenges around workforce health, access to care and employee productivity," said Dr. Rebecca Kirsch. "When workers can get timely treatment and guidance after an injury, they recover faster, spend less time away from work and achieve better outcomes. Expanding access to occupational health services in the Treasure Valley helps support both local workers and the employers who depend on them."

Concentra's Boise medical center demonstrates the company's continued investment in expanding access to occupational medicine services across the Mountain West and strengthening its nationwide network of care.
