Quanta Shareholder Update

BURBANK, Calif., May 29, 2020 /PRNewswire/ -- Quanta, Inc. (OTCPK:QNTA), an applied sciences company based on a patented quantum biology platform that significantly boosts the potency and efficiency of any plant-based matter, announced an update for shareholders relating to recent corporate events and SEC filings.

Eric Rice, Chief Executive Officer of Quanta commented, "We have taken several actions to optimize our capital structure, including the refunding of a senior secured debt facility with terms that are more flexible and beneficial to us. The two convertible notes that remain are held by high quality, friendly, long-term shareholders, with conversion features that are also favorable to the company."

"Also as we announced earlier this week, we have adjusted the pricing on certain options for our employees, to reward and compensate them for losses experienced due to the strict stay-at-home regulations mandated by the state of California for more than two months. We are extremely proud of all our team members for staying focused on the big picture in a time of so much uncertainty. All of our employee options have a 3 to 4-year vesting schedule, which made this a simple, cost-effective, non-dilutive way to thank our valued team members."

The company also announced that it has begun to ship its own Quanta branded hand sanitizer product to one of its distribution partners, with over two hundred retail locations throughout the Midwestern United States. The first order, for 5,000 units, is expected to be on store shelves in 2 weeks and is part of a branding and sales campaign that adds an incremental new revenue stream for Quanta.

The company is also taking actions to improve shareholder communications by launching a new Twitter account (QNTAstock) today and a new investor relations website in the coming weeks.
