Company Overview

Medexus is a leading orphan drug and rare disease pharmaceutical company with a strong North American commercial platform and a growing portfolio of innovative treatment solutions. Medexus's current focus is on the therapeutic areas of hematology and hematology-oncology and rheumatology and allergy.

GRAFAPEX, an alkylating drug indicated for use in combination with fludarabine as a preparative regimen for allogeneic hematopoietic stem cell transplantation, represents a significant growth opportunity for Medexus. This is driven by its potential to address unmet needs in transplant medicine and expand the company's presence within hematology-oncology. With increasing adoption across transplant centers, GRAFAPEX could become a key driver of revenue growth and long-term value creation for the company.
