Sanmina is a global contract electronics manufacturer and one of the world's largest medical device manufacturers. Under the agreement, Sanmina will provide the design and testing to advance Soliton's RAP device for use in future clinical trials and eventually to lay the foundation for a commercial launch of the Company's products.

"Working with Sanmina in this commercialization phase not only provides us with world-class quality and documentation," commented Dr. Chris Capelli, Soliton's CEO, "but we also believe it will make for a smoother transition to manufacturing, which we expect to begin here in the US later this year."

About Soliton, Inc.

Soliton, Inc. is a medical device company with a novel and proprietary platform technology licensed from MD Anderson. The Company's first planned commercial product is designed to use rapid pulses of designed acoustic shockwaves in conjunction with existing lasers to accelerate the removal of unwanted tattoos (RAP device). In addition, higher energy versions of acoustic pulse devices are in early stages of development for potential stand-alone treatment of cellulite and other indications. Both products are investigational and are not available for sale in the United States.
