With the Hollywood.com app, users can compare several factors when shopping for movie tickets including the movie, available showtimes, nearby theaters, and seat options. With this info at their fingertips, users can compare all available combinations in seconds from one single screen in a single transaction flow. Once a user finds their ideal tickets, it takes just a few taps to purchase.

“We wanted to create an innovative way where anyone who loves movies will be able to reserve the best seats — from small or indie, to epic blockbusters — and to give true entertainment enthusiasts an enhanced experience. Coupled with one of the strongest movie slates in history, the launch of the Hollywood.com app comes at a pivotal moment in the entertainment world,” said Laurie Silvers, co-CEO of Hollywood.com.

Free for download on iOS and Android mobile devices, Hollywood.com is also the only movie ticketing provider that offers live 24/7 customer support over the phone. Hollywood.com anticipates future updates to incorporate the use of AMC’s loyalty program, AMC Stubs.

Hollywood.com was the first website to nationally display movie showtimes online. Twenty years later, entertainment lovers across the world continue to turn to Hollywood.com for entertainment content including celebrity interviews, red carpet coverage, movie reviews, movie showtimes, and more.

“As veterans of Hollywood entertainment, and pioneers of digital ticketing technology for the motion picture industry and fans ourselves, we know how to deliver an authentic enjoyable Hollywood experience via groundbreaking technology that is unlike anything else out there today,” said Silvers. “We designed our new app with today’s moviegoers in mind. This is just the beginning for our evolving entertainment platform.”
