Outlook Update

- While the Company believes it has sufficient funds and current receivables to achieve its guidance, the Company does recognize it has more opportunities than sales and services resources to close upside growth.

Operational Highlights

- On June 1, 2023, the Company announced that it had both added another new customer (Nintex) to its list of growing clients while securing a fourth license with an existing global customer (Estee Lauder), with incremental revenue from these contracts expected to exceed $200,000 in the next twelve months, including over $100,000 of recurring revenue in the first year.

"Growth exiting Fiscal Year 2023 continued into the first quarter of this year, as the Company recorded a new historic high in recurring revenue licenses, both from new and existing customers, further demonstrating our 'land and expand' strategy. Our ARR is approaching $6 million and continues to grow each quarter." Chief Executive Officer Andrew T. Duncan commented, "We continue to build on and replenish our pipeline, adding new prospects in both the enterprise sector and via our teaming partners in the global banking and financial services channel. Exiting the summer, we have been experiencing a notable pick up in both new engagements and even customer re-engagements. Thus, we expect to close incremental deals with new enterprises and financial services companies in the months ahead. The Boardwalktech low code digital ledger platform continues to gain traction with these enterprises, especially in supply chain, as it seamlessly solves the many problems associated with structured and unstructured data delivering improved visibility and decision making along with outstanding results and ROI."
