"Paychex is among the most profitable companies in America, in part because of the excellent processes we have in place," said John Morphy, (http://paychex.tekgroup.com/section_display.cfm?section_id=3&navItem=photo) Paychex senior vice president and chief financial officer. "These awards are a real tribute to the great job done by the Paychex risk management team - work that's positively reflected in our shareholder value."

Paychex's submission for the award detailed the development and launch of a leading-edge credit risk management program, one that resulted in a drastic reduction of losses, from $10 million three years ago to just $3.5 million today.

"Risk management is an integral part of the business model at Paychex," said Frank Fiorille, Paychex director of enterprise risk management. "Everything we do, from building a client retention model to implementing a disaster recovery plan, involves creating and delivering an appropriate framework to manage risk."

Paychex received a total of four awards, more than any other company recognized by Treasury & Risk. A complete list of the 12th annual Alexander Hamilton Awards for
