NEW YORK, Sept. 16, 2020 /PRNewswire/ -- Similarweb, the world's leading market intelligence company, today announced that Kevin Spurway and Ron Asher have joined the executive leadership team as Chief Marketing Officer and Chief Technology Officer, respectively, and will report to CEO Or Offer.

Kevin will be responsible for global marketing efforts for Similarweb, and will be based in Washington, DC. Ron will lead the company's engineering organization, responsible for Similarweb's product and data development, and will be based at the company's headquarters in Tel Aviv.

"We're excited to welcome Ron and Kevin to the Similarweb team at one of the most exciting times in our company's history," said Similarweb founder and CEO, Or Offer. "Each one brings a unique perspective and wealth of knowledge at a time of tremendous growth, and I am confident in their ability to bring the company to the next level in their respective disciplines."

Kevin brings over 20 years of experience building and leading high-performance marketing teams. Most recently, he was CMO at Appian, where he helped drive strong growth through Appian's 2017 IPO and beyond. Prior to Appian, Kevin was SVP of Marketing at MicroStrategy, a public company with more than 2000 employees, where he was responsible for product marketing and product management of the company's analytics solutions. The two leaders join Similarweb at a time of strong growth. The company expects to increase headcount by an additional 20% before the end of the year, and currently has nearly 100 open roles globally.
