"Today marks an important milestone as we continue to execute on our transformational journey," said Josef Matosevic, the Company's President and Chief Executive Officer. "We believe this move enhances our visibility as a pure play global electronics/hydraulics company, which we expect will provide long-term value for our shareholders."

He concluded, "We are thrilled to have the NYSE as our new exchange partner. We look forward to leveraging the Exchange's unique market model combining cutting-edge technology and human oversight, the unmatched network of CEOs and business leaders that include some of our top customers, the incomparable brand visibility that comes from an Exchange listing, and core investor-relations services."
