ENGLEWOOD, Colo.--(BUSINESS WIRE)-- Liberty Media Corporation ("Liberty") (Nasdaq: LCAPA, LCAPB, LINTA, LINTB, LSTZA, LSTZB) today announced the 2012 Media for Liberty Award jury panel. Eligible works must be originally published or transmitted via print or electronic media during the 2011 calendar year, and received by Liberty Media no later than January 9, 2012. There is a $50,000 prize for the winning entry. The call for entries for year three is currently open.

The distinguished Media for Liberty panel represents thought leaders in the world of journalism and media:

The Media for Liberty Award is open to journalists worldwide whose original works bring new insights on societal issues, news events, economies, political structures and cultures that illustrate their prosperity or struggle in their pursuit of a free market environment and civil liberties uninfluenced by government agenda.

Submitted works will be reviewed by a jury panel and evaluated based on the degree to which the theme is addressed, inspirational and educational value, relevance to the public discourse, and mastery of media format.

The winner of last year's Media for Liberty Award was an essay titled "How a New Jobless Era will Transform America" by Don Peck published in the March 2010 edition of The Atlantic which speculated on the lasting effects of the recent Great Depression on American society, culture, politics, national security and its beloved institutions. The prior year's finalist was a CBS 60 Minutes segment titled "Congo Gold" in which 60 Minutes traveled to the war-torn region of eastern Congo to investigate the connection between the mining of gold and other precious minerals and widespread violence in the region.
