Fusion's Single Source Cloud Solutions Help Drive Primary Healthcare Organization's Expansion

NEW YORK, January 12, 2016 -- Fusion (Nasdaq: FSNN) a leading provider of cloud services, announced today that Fidelity, a Fusion company, has secured a three year, $150,000 agreement with a major Primary Healthcare organization to initially connect three of its twelve primary healthcare centers to the Fusion cloud. Citing Fusion's fully integrated suite of cloud solutions as a primary reason for the selection, this practice of more than fifty physicians has been growing at a rapid pace, and anticipates expanding the company's integrated cloud solutions to all of its locations. The practice was intent on choosing a provider to deliver the full complement of communications services it needs to deliver a consistently high quality of care to its patients and the broader community.

Fusion replaces a complex multi-vendor communications environment with an optimized cloud-based solution that converges the organization's burgeoning voice and data requirements. The practice delivers personalized care with a strong commitment to providing the information patients need to get and stay healthy. That means services need to be up and running with data flowing on time, all the time. Offering a full range of specialized services, including women's health and pediatrics, rheumatology and sports medicine, the healthcare organization places a strong emphasis on helping its patients navigate today's complex healthcare landscape. It was impressed with Fusion's ability to design and deliver a secure, reliable and integrated communications infrastructure and services solution that is comprehensive, yet fast and easy to deploy, simple to manage and cost-effective.

"We were delighted to welcome the outstanding Fidelity sales, support and technology team to Fusion, and pleased that our immediate integration and expansion of the company's service environment contributed the advantages of Fusion's robust, diverse network and advanced proprietary cloud services platform, helping to drive the many benefits of the cloud to this leading healthcare organization, now and in the future. Fidelity has earned a reputation for service excellence that clearly resonates with this rapidly expanding primary healthcare facility, and we are confident that Fusion's fully integration solution will allow it to focus on what it does best – deliver the highest levels of comprehensive, compassionate patient care," said Russell P.
