

SURVEY: Most Middle-Income Americans Plan to Use Tax Refunds to Pay Bills and Pay Down Debt

Of those who expect to owe taxes, more than 80% don't expect to have problems funding them

DULUTH, Ga.--(BUSINESS WIRE)-- Primerica, Inc. (NYSE: PRI), a leading provider of financial services in the United States and Canada, released tax data from the Middle-Income Financial Security Monitor for the first quarter of 2023. The national survey, in its third year, measures changes in the sentiments of middle-income families in the U.S. about their finances.

The survey found that the majority of middle-income families (60%) are expecting a tax refund this year. The largest segment of respondents (36%) anticipate their refund will be less than last year, while one-third (33%) believe they will receive about the same amount. Roughly one-quarter (24%) expect to receive more than last year. Among the roughly one-third (30%) of respondents who expect to owe taxes, a solid majority (81%) do not anticipate they will have problems paying them or need to go on a payment plan to do so.

Respondents who expect a refund say they plan to use the money to pay bills (37%), pay down debt (34%) or add to their savings account (33%). Just 1% said they would put the money into a retirement account.

“Primerica’s survey finds that most households were thoughtful in their financial planning so that they did not owe taxes at filing time, a sometimes painful surprise,” said Amy Crews Cutts, Ph.D., CBE®, economic consultant to Primerica. “The findings also show that nearly all of middle-income households who anticipate a refund are thinking about their financial security as they plan to apply refunds to reducing debt, paying bills, or add to their savings.”

Additional Tax Insights from Primerica’s Middle-Income Financial Security Monitor

- Most tackle taxes on their own. More than half (56%) say they prepare their own taxes, while an additional 10% say a family member, spouse or partner does their taxes for them.
- Looking to the pros to reduce burden. Nearly one-third (32%) hire a professional to prepare their taxes. The top reason for doing so is to reduce their tax burden (46%), followed by eliminating the stress of doing taxes (27%) and not knowing how to complete their tax forms (21%).
- Financial preparedness is key. Respondents who scored the highest in financial preparedness are likelier to expect a tax refund.
