Capital City Bank Announces Expanded Role for Community Banker Kelli Williamson in Gilchrist County

BRANFORD, Fla., April 1, 2026 – Capital City Bank is proud to announce Community Banker Kelli Williamson now serves an expanded coverage area that includes Gilchrist and Suwannee counties and the communities of Branford, Bell and Trenton.

In her role as a community banker, Williamson takes a relationship-centered approach to financial services, working closely with commercial, agricultural and consumer clients. She partners with local businesses, farmers and families to help them build and maintain strong financial futures.

Williamson has nearly 20 years of experience with Capital City Bank, having joined the organization April 10, 2006, and has built a career rooted in long-term client and community relationships. Beginning her career at age 21, she has spent the past two decades building trusted relationships within her communities while growing professionally within the Bank. She is a graduate of the Florida School of Banking.

A dedicated member of the Branford community, Williamson demonstrates her commitment to service through active involvement in both her church and local schools. She is a member of Orchard Community Church and has a strong passion for supporting young adults. Williamson also serves as president of the Branford Dugout Club, the booster organization for Branford High School Baseball, where she helps lead efforts to provide lasting resources that enhance the program and benefit current and future student-athletes.

Deeply connected to the local school system, Williamson and her family are actively involved in youth athletics and community activities. She has been married to her high school sweetheart, Brian, for 20 years, and they have two children. Brian serves as the Branford Farm Bureau agent and Branford High School baseball coach, and together they enjoy supporting their children and investing in the communities they call home.
