GA Version of Coveo G2B for Email is Now Available for Download

Powerful mobile email search solution unleashes access to critical business information from both active and archived emails

BOSTON--(BUSINESS WIRE)--

Coveo Solutions Inc., a global provider of search-powered information access solutions, announced today the general availability of Coveo G2B(TM) for Email - the only email search application to deliver unified search and navigation across both active and archived email (i.e., Microsoft(R) Exchange, Lotus Notes, Symantec Enterprise Vault(TM)) from any connected desktop, Windows Mobile(R) or BlackBerry(R) mobile device.

"In 2008, on a typical day 785 million people will send 25 billion person-to-person business emails worldwide," said Mark Levitt, Program Vice President for Collaborative Computing and the Enterprise Workplace at IDC. "By enabling business users to quickly access their active and archived email information on their mobile devices, Coveo G2B for Email is designed to address the requirement that many workers have for mobile access to the critical business information that exists in email for making important business decisions."

With email quickly becoming the unofficial de-facto file server, business people are finding it increasingly important to instantly access critical business information contained within their email folders, archives and corresponding attachments while out of the office. Coveo G2B for Email allows business people to quickly search for and access their most critical information - whether it resides in an Excel spreadsheet, PowerPoint presentation, a PDF file, or as contact information in Microsoft Exchange.

Employees are often required to diminish the size of their email boxes by either deleting or moving critical data to PST files on local drives or portable disks. However, this creates a security risk by allowing employees to walk off with this important information. By preventing these files from leaving a company and by providing a complete view of a company's current and archived data, Coveo G2B for Email neutralizes corporate security risks and ensures that businesses are fully prepared to meet today's most stringent compliance regulations.

"Time is money and failure to provide mobile access to information within email corpuses could prevent a sales win or lose an important business opportunity," said Laurent Simoneau, Coveo's president and CEO. "While access to critical information that exists in corporate email has become pivotal to the success of today's businesses, Coveo G2B for Email serves as a key component to keeping businesses fully compliant, rather than having to rely on eDiscovery solutions after the fact."
