Tier One Commercial Real Estate Firm Issues News Release Announcing CrossLayer™ as a Key Technology Service Provider

NAPLES, Fla., June 05, 2018 (GLOBE NEWSWIRE) -- In a news release [<https://www.cbre.us/about/media-center/technology-veteran-rick-varnell-joins-cbre>] issued yesterday, one of the largest global commercial real estate firms included CrossLayer, an FTE Networks, Inc. subsidiary (NYSE American:FTNW), as one of its key technology service providers to bring advanced network solutions to hundreds of commercial buildings across the United States.

Commentary from Company executives:

"This technology partnership is a testament to how FTE is disrupting the "4th utility" by changing how buildings connect to the internet. By utilizing the CrossLayer technology to create smart buildings, the building owners stand to realize an incremental recurring revenue stream from the provisioning of the services. By providing enhanced services to tenants and an additional income stream to landlords, CrossLayer delivers a dynamic solution that both increases the marketability and enhances the value of commercial real estate. This technology partnership, with a worldwide commercial real estate firm, demonstrates the market leading technology and other solutions that FTE delivers to our clients. We're looking forward to demonstrating how our technology solutions will help equip one of the largest commercial real estate portfolios."

- Mr. Michael Palleschi, President and CEO of FTE Networks, Inc.

"An increasingly connected world requires the most advanced communications network to deliver speed and reliability to users wherever they choose to work within an office or campus environment. CrossLayer's ultra-fast, highly secure network will enable tenants and guests to connect seamlessly, bringing the potential for greater productivity and collaboration for businesses with the ability to generate revenue for building owners."

- Mr. Lynn Martin, President of CrossLayer
