Dealers gain efficiency: Equifax helps fuel DealerPolicy's solution that enables car buying for the digital age

Partnership reduces time spent in the car buying process, enables DriverIQ™ solution, and enhances security

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 25, 2019 /PRNewswire/ -- Equifax Inc. (NYSE: EFX), a global information solutions company, announced today it is joining forces with DealerPolicy to help automotive dealerships enable digital retailing through a more streamlined car buying experience that saves car buyers and automotive retailers time.

According to Cox Automotive's 2018 Car Buyer Journey Study, fewer than half of consumers are happy with the average three-hour transaction time at the dealership today. 69 percent of automotive retailers recognize the need to create a better customer experience and a more streamlined sales environment like that offered by Equifax and DealerPolicy.

DealerPolicy's innovative technology platform allows car buyers to review competitive insurance quotes and speak with a licensed insurance agent while at the car dealership or after they return home with their new car. Given the opportunity to view competing quotes from a wide array of insurance carriers, car buyers save on their monthly premium, and gain an average of $3,200 more in buying power to put toward their new vehicle purchase. The company will use Equifax's unique technology to prepopulate much of the information needed to provide insurance quotes and submit a finance application, reducing the number of form fields a customer needs to fill out to two (date of birth and zip code). Dealerships at the elite membership level also receive the DriverIQ™ report, with crucial customer information like credit score, income verification, and employment verification, all enabled through Equifax.

"Today's competitive retailing experience can only appeal to car shoppers when dealers provide an experience above and beyond a good price for a vehicle," said Lena Aksan, vice president, enterprise alliances, Equifax. "Programs such as DealerPolicy's digital insurance platform create a retail experience that drives value for all the participants, from the car buyer, to the dealer, to the insurance carrier. This value proposition, kept safe through Equifax verification tools, creates a customer journey that saves time and builds trust and long-term possibilities."

"We're excited about this partnership and what it does to enable our dealer partners," said Mike Burgiss, chief product officer at DealerPolicy. Our partnership with Equifax will enable a lightning fast process for the car buyer, which is good for them and great for automotive retailers. DealerPolicy's DriverIQ™ report will offer accurate, credible data that's verifiable for each individual shopping for a vehicle, all powered by Equifax and its enablement of digital retail solutions."

DealerPolicy is continuing its national expansion plan with hundreds of dealerships across nine states. DealerPolicy is the industry's first all-inclusive insurance solution that provides car buying customers with speed, transparency, choice, and access to licensed agents for their insurance needs.
