"Red Robin launched the Tip-A-Cop program in our restaurants eight years ago and, with the help of participating law enforcement officials and the generosity of our guests who have made donations, we have provided more than $2.5 million to Special Olympics programs across the country," said Eric Houseman, president and chief operating officer at Red Robin, and long-time supporter of Special Olympics. "After raising more than $650,000 last year, we are proud to again partner with local law enforcement officials and Coca-Cola to support Special Olympics in the communities we serve."

"Our annual Red Robin Tip-A-Cop events are always a good time for a great cause," said Michael Teem, executive director, Law Enforcement Torch Run for Special Olympics. "The tremendous level of law enforcement and community support, and the unparalleled generosity from Red Robin and Coca-Cola, are what will make this event so successful this year. The money raised will be used to support both Special Olympics events and the mission of inclusion and acceptance for people with intellectual disabilities. Throughout the United States, such funding will support year-round sports training and athletic competition in a variety of Olympic-type sports."

Tip-A-Cop is part of the annual Law Enforcement Torch Run® (LETR) campaign in support of Special Olympics. LETR, which includes an international series of relay runs and special events like Tip-A-Cop, is supported by more than 100,000 law enforcement officers worldwide who help raise money and public awareness for Special Olympics.
