Weave Named to the 2024 Women Tech Council Shatter List for Third Consecutive Year

This recognition reflects Weave's ongoing commitment to fostering inclusivity and career growth for women in tech

LEHI, Utah--(BUSINESS WIRE)-- Weave (NYSE: WEAV), a leading all-in-one experience platform for small- and medium-sized healthcare practices, has been named to the 2024 Shatter List by the Women Tech Council.

The Shatter List is awarded to technology companies that create and enact practices and cultures that remove the glass ceiling. The Women in Tech Council scores companies on four factors critical to building inclusive cultures with meaningful measures that help women break and surpass the glass ceiling in technology. Weave supports women through a company-sponsored people resource group, flexible time off, generous paid family leave, networking and mentorship opportunities, and collaboration with many organizations that are focused on gender inclusion in the tech industry.

“Creating a culture that uplifts women and helps them thrive is a job we do not take lightly at Weave, especially as a tech company with a people-first mission,” said Brooke Shreeve, Chief People Officer of Weave. “We are committed to creating a culture that fosters community, provides support, and helps women develop professionally in the industry. We are proud to be a part of the Shatter List and appreciate the work the Women Tech Council is doing to create a better environment for women in tech.”
