Randall Rothschiller Joins TrueBlue as Chief Human Resources Officer

TACOMA, Wash.--(BUSINESS WIRE)-- TrueBlue (NYSE:TBI), a leading provider of specialized workforce solutions, announced that Randall Rothschiller has been named chief human resources officer. Rothschiller, a resident of Kent, started in his new position June 6 at TrueBlue's headquarters in Tacoma.

"Randy will be a great addition to our team because of his global management experience and commitment to a high-performance culture," TrueBlue President and COO Patrick Beharelle said.

Rothschiller was previously chief human resources officer at Savers, a retailer with 20,000 employees spread across the U.S., Canada and Australia, and headquartered in Bellevue. At TrueBlue, Rothschiller will direct human resources programs for a company that has more than 5,000 employees and also connects 840,000 people to work each year through its specialized staffing, on-site workforce management and recruitment process outsourcing operations.

"I'm thrilled to be part of a company that is building its brand as 'The People Company'. It's a great feeling to join a team dedicated to the value people can infuse into the overall business, and I look forward to working with the leadership team to advance current efforts as well as establishing new goals to support future growth," Rothschiller said.
