Change Agents Joins Association of the United States Army, Expanding Engagement Across U.S. Defense Ecosystem

Company to Participate in 2026 AUSA Annual Meeting & Exposition in Washington, D.C., Bringing Together U.S. Army Leadership, Defense Industry Leaders and Emerging Technology Companies

FREEHOLD, N.J., Sept. 24, 2026 (GLOBE NEWSWIRE) -- Change Agents Corporation (Nasdaq: CHGA) ("Change Agents" or the "Company"), a developer of agentic artificial intelligence ("AI") software solutions advancing into AI-enabled autonomous air surveillance and air defense counter-unmanned aerial systems ("C-UAS") technologies, today announced that it has joined the Association of the United States Army ("AUSA") and plans to participate in the 2026 AUSA Annual Meeting & Exposition, being held October 12–14, 2026, at the Walter E. Washington Convention Center in Washington, D.C.

AUSA is a nonprofit educational organization supporting America's Army, including Active, Guard and Reserve soldiers, Army civilians, retirees and families. Its Annual Meeting & Exposition is one of North America's leading land-power and defense industry events, bringing together military leadership, policymakers, international delegations, defense contractors and technology companies from across the global defense ecosystem.

Change Agents' membership and planned participation in the Annual Meeting are expected to provide additional opportunities for the Company to engage with military stakeholders and defense technology companies as it continues building its presence in the autonomous surveillance, air defense and C-UAS markets.

The 2026 AUSA Annual Meeting is expected to feature more than 750 exhibits and tens of thousands of attendees, providing a forum for engagement around emerging technologies, U.S. Army priorities and the evolving requirements of modern defense operations.

"We believe joining AUSA and participating in its Annual Meeting represent important steps in expanding Change Agents' engagement with the U.S. defense community," said Michael Mathews, Director of Change Agents Corp. "As we advance our strategy in AI-enabled autonomous surveillance, air defense and counter-UAS technologies, developing relationships across the military and defense technology ecosystem is an important component of our growth strategy. The AUSA Annual Meeting provides an opportunity to engage directly with Army leadership, defense industry participants and technology innovators as we evaluate potential partnerships, acquisitions and other opportunities that can accelerate our expansion in this market.”

Change Agents recently formed Autonomous Air Defense LLC, a wholly owned subsidiary established to pursue opportunities in AI-enabled autonomous drone surveillance and counter-UAS technologies. The Company is evaluating strategic acquisition and partnership opportunities as it seeks to build a broader platform serving the rapidly evolving autonomous surveillance and defense market.

Participation in AUSA complements Change Agents’ broader efforts to establish relationships across the defense and technology sectors and gain greater exposure to evolving military requirements, emerging autonomous technologies and potential strategic partners.

About Change Agents Corporation
