

UPLISTING SUMMARY

After it picked up some pace in May, the uplisting and cross-listing market continued remained relatively active in June, closing the second quarter with 2 issuers listing their shares on Nasdaq, raising $4 million.

One of the uplisting and cross-listing issuers is from the microcap space (issuers with up to $300 million market cap), listing on Nasdaq after closing a $4 million public offering, the first by a micro-cap issuer during the quarter. For the first time in 2023, the public offering included a tradeable warrant. The offering included the registration of selling stockholders accounting for 9.78% of the post-offering public float. The second issuer is large-cap company, organically (meaning, without consummating an underwritten public offering) cross-listing on Nasdaq from the London Stock Exchange.

One of the issuers operates in the communication services sector, with the second operating in the healthcare sector.

Overall, the uplisting and cross-listing market remained selective in June, with uplisting and cross-listing micro-cap issuers continuing to rely on legacy stockholders to satisfy Nasdaq's public float listing requirement.
