Global Eagle Entertainment Announces Its Satellite Connectivity System is Now Provisions Offerable on New Boeing 737 Airplanes

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 20, 2015 (GLOBE NEWSWIRE) --Global Eagle Entertainment Inc. (Nasdaq:ENT), a worldwide leading provider of content, connectivity and digital media solutions to airlines, and global aircraft manufacturing giant Boeing (NYSE:BA), today announced that Global Eagle's (GEE) Ku-band satellite connectivity system provisions will be offerable on new Boeing 737 airplanes.

GEE continues to actively work with Boeing on line-fit installation feasibility for catalogue offering consideration. Airlines ordering new Boeing 737 airplanes will then have the option of including pre-installed satellite connectivity by GEE in their aircraft prior to delivery.

"With the 737 being the most popular aircraft in the world in terms of new orders, this achievement marks a major milestone for GEE to expand its connectivity system offering," commented Dave Davis, CEO at GEE. "The ability to deliver Ku-band and future Ku-HTS connectivity on new Boeing airplane orders enables us to answer the strong demand for a superior inflight connectivity offering and provides airlines access to the most technically-advanced connectivity solution in the market as a pre-installed option."
